

The development of correspondence chess in the United Kingdom in the 19th century

By Tim Harding (ICCF Senior I.M.)

A little bit about my project

- In-depth research from 1824-1914
- Primary sources e.g. chess columns
- “Grass-roots” not master chess
- Social/cultural context & connections
- Game/ result collection is secondary
- Double objective: chess book & thesis

Types of event

- Consultation matches
- Private games between individuals
- Serial games in periodicals
- Knock-out tournaments
- Thematic events (set openings)
- All-play-all tournaments
- Team matches (individual opponents)

The Bruno Bassi thesis

- First CC history (1948-52, incomplete)
- Bassi divided into periods:
- “Prehistory” to 1800
- “Golden Age” 1800-51
- Early Modern 1851-88
- International tournaments 1888-
- IFSB 1928-39 (technical organisation)
- ICCA 1946- (precursor of ICCF)

What is wrong with this picture?

- Methodologically & empirically flawed
- Cited by 'Oxford Companion' as if fact
- "Pre-history" didn't end until 1824
- No "golden age" before 1851
- CC grows, not declines, after 1851
- Factors benefiting OTB also helped CC
- What did Bassi really mean?

U.K. timeline: landmarks

- Only landmarks: NOT Bassi-style “periods”
- 1824 London-Edinburgh match starts
- 1840 Penny Post. Individual games
- 1853 KO tourneys in weekly journals
- 1870 First CC club founded
- 1877 UK-USA match
- 1887 Fraser International
- 1906 BCCA founded

Some tournament organisers

- Rev Arthur B. Skipworth
- W. Bridgwater (Birmingham)
- Charles J. Lambert (Exeter)
- George B. Fraser (Dundee)
- Joseph Blake (Southampton)
- William Gunston (Cambridge)

Edinburgh v London 1824-8

- First inter-club match to start (just!)
- Great public interest
- ‘Scotch Game’ got its name
- Winner was first to win 2 games
- Replay of draws helped Scots (4 whites)
- Influenced CC rules to this day
- Controversial after-life of event

'Family Paper' tournaments

- Cassell's Illustrated Family Paper
- Seven knock-out events, 1853-67
- Organised by columnist H. C. Mott
- 32 players: took 6 years to complete
- Largest had 128 entries
- Some leading amateurs participated
- Many players used initials or 'handles'

Some major inter-city matches

- 1824-8 London loses to Edinburgh
- 1834-5 Westminster lose to Paris
- 1848-51 London win Amsterdam matches
- 1871 Oxford University bt. Cambridge
